The killer app is money

The real “killer app” is still... money.

The real “killer app” of crypto is, and always has been, money. This was true in 2008 when Bitcoin was created, and it is even more true today, with increased worldwide inflation and authoritarian governments. It’s a multi-trillion dollar market.

Problem:

Two cryptocurrencies currently dominate worldwide transactions: Tether and Bitcoin. But they are slow, expensive and hard to use for most people. The average person in Argentina or Lebanon is not going to a Metamask wallet, pay ETH gas fees, or wait 1 hour for a Bitcoin transaction to settle. The world desperately needs fast versions of both of these coins and the ability to swap between them.

Solution:

Libre is a new blockchain and ecosystem that makes both Bitcoin and Tether super easy to use, without sacrificing decentralization. It features ultra-fast peg in / peg out with Bitcoin and Bitcoin Lightning, and blazingly fast, gas free transactions. Everything in Libre is 10 times as fast and intuitive as previous blockchain platforms.

Libre is also decentralized. The Bitcoin and USDT peg-in/out on Libre is handled by the decentralized PNetwork (MPC nodes). Lightning Node Providers can connect to Libre and earn fees. The swap is incentivized directly from the chain with farming rewards. There is no dependency on any single app, user interface, or a centralized team.

Mint Rush: Fair Launch

On Dec 15, 2022 the public launch of the LIBRE token started. This is a unique event called the “Mint Rush.” It is a “fair launch” because of the way that price discovery and token distribution works. 200M coins will be distributed to anyone who contributes Bitcoin during the Mint Rush time period. 100% of the BTC contributed will go into a liquidity pool along with 200M LIBRE — owned by all of the Mint Rush contributors.

Killer App

Watch just 2 minutes of this video from Andreas M. Antonopoulos starting from 29:00 min in — he’s basically explaining the “WHY” behind Libre and the very simple argument that “money is the killer app.”
